

SOUTH NEWFANE.

Constructor for Ship Builders.

Mrs. Samuel G. (Beulah Kendall) Reed and daughters, Miss Marion Reed, Jean and Ruth Reed, en route to their new home in Beaumont, Texas, from Seaboard, Oregon, where they have lived for some years, are spending a few weeks with Mrs. Reed's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Kendall, at San Bernardino, California. From a San Bernardino daily of recent date the following paragraph is clipped:

"Samuel Gordon Reed, son-in-law of A. G. Kendall of the Farmers' Exchange National Bank, has accepted a position as constructor in one of the large ship-building corporations operating in Beaumont, Texas, and is already building ships on the Gulf coast. It develops that Mr. Reed, who is a graduate of Boston Tech, made a naval architect his major in his college course, and although he had not followed it heretofore, is an expert in that line of work. In Portland he had been manager for a big electric company and had also been interested in some big real-estate transactions. Some months ago the executive of the Beaumont company visited Portland, met Mr. Reed, was impressed by him as a man of affairs and of compelling personality, and when he found that he was also technically qualified for a position in the shipbuilding offices, the offer followed. Mr. Reed went to Texas to look the situation over and ended by accepting the place."
